

NEW YORK POST

New York Post, Saturday, April 3, 2004 nypost.com

Break away from school and have fun

Then again, maybe you don't want to look back but forward — at the playwrights of tomorrow. Sixty-five New York City teens wrote and star in the musical "ReVisions," presented by the youth group City at Peace. The play chronicles harsh realities of urban teens and their hopes for a better tomorrow. Performances are Saturday through Monday at 8 p.m. at the John Jay College Theatre, 899 10th Ave., between 58th and 59th streets. Tickets: $10-$30; (212) 924-2167.

Meet the teen playwrights from City at Peace, who'll perform their work "ReVisions" through Monday at John Jay.